Andrew Busey works with industry stakeholders, regulatory agencies, and other groups to analyze energy and environmental matters and conduct economic impact assessments.

Mr. Busey believes sound, rigorous econometric analyses are key to the development of socially efficient regulation. He has participated in benefit and cost assessments for numerous nuclear and fossil electric power plants under Section 316(b) of the Clean Water Act. Much of his recent work has considered the macroeconomic impacts of regulations, projects, and investments, incorporating important complications such as dynamic impacts and spillover effects.
