Brigid Jung provides trusted advice to hospitals, health insurers, and other healthcare companies on potential transactions and proceedings. She believes a detailed, impartial, and transparent review of transactions and legal actions can help transform the US health care system for the better and enable health care companies to innovate and optimize performance.

Ms. Jung analyzes large data sets from public and private sources to simulate mergers so that clients and enforcers can understand the impacts a potential merger could have on the market. As part of antitrust investigations, she assesses allegations of monopolization and excess market power and provides analyses to determine if it caused harm to the market or consumers.

Ms. Jung is certified in Health Policy Analysis and Health Care Economics. She has training and experience with health care data, transactions, and suits.
